

I decided to have the customer and concessions databases stand alone because I dislike data collection on people.

Movies and tickets link one to many because a movie will have only one id but many tickets will be bought for a film.

I used integers rather than numeric because there is only a significant difference in psychology between $6.99 and $7, the mathematical difference is less than 1%.